

WEDDING DREAMS

A fascinating and elegant atmosphere with superb service

WELCOME TO MAISON MESSMER BADEN-BADEN

The matchless flair of Baden-Baden presents the ideal setting for the experience of a lifetime. Ever since the days of the Kaisers, this summer capital of Europe has exuded an aura of sophistication with the fascination of its classical art nouveau treasures and palatial hotels, its profusion of rose blossoms and its spacious parks.

THE MAISON MESSMER COUNTRY HOUSE

In 1833, the Secretary of the Baden War Ministry, Johann Baptist Messmer, built a country house on a hill next to what would later be the spa house and the casino. His guests included the nobility, diplomats, writers and poets.

Within the space of only a few years, Maison Messmer was to become the annual summer residence of Germany's and Europe's political classes.

In the year of the Revolution, Prince Wilhelm came to Baden-Baden and chose to stay, of all places, at the home of the passionate democrat Johann Baptist Messmer. However, the hospitality of his political opponent turned wariness into friendship: "I came to you as an enemy, but next time I shall return as a friend," said the man who was to be Kaiser on his departure. And he kept his word. Over a period of 40 years, Maison Messmer was the summer residence of the German imperial couple.

MAISON MESSMER

1860/61

Never was Baden-Baden more of a summer capital than in this year, when the aristocracy gathered in congress: The Kings of Bavaria, Württemberg, Saxony and Hannover arrived, the Grand Dukes of Baden and Sachsen-Weimar graced the assembly with their presence – everyone of rank and distinction met in Baden-Baden.

The Prussians resided in Maison Messmer, with the consequence that many of the conferences were held, not in the castle, but in the "Messmer". The annual visits by the Kaiser had made Maison Messmer famous. Here it was that Kaiser Wilhelm I. met together with Queen Victoria, Empress Elisabeth of Austria and the Czar's family.

1956/57

The First World War had ended the heyday of the spa's urbanity and there was no option but to sell the house. The German economic miracle and a desire for a fresh start symbolised a new zeitgeist: Everything had to be more modern – including the architecture.

The writer Reinhold Schneider, son of the last hotelier Schneider-Messmer, was forced to witness the demolition of his parental home. In his novel "The Balcony", he revives the magical atmosphere of the old house and narrates the tale of its tragic end.

2000/01

The Dorint Group discovered Maison Messmer and decided to rebuild the famed traditional address as a 5-star hotel. On the same site as its predecessor, right next door to Germany's oldest casino, Maison Messmer is proof that success is a journey, not a destination.
